The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a and b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Hartley et al., Bowlin et al., Hale, Nahm, Sharp, Richardson et al., or Carpenter et al.

Hartley et al. teach mixing drill cuttings and cement or cement kiln dust to form a rigid matrix which is a load bearing structure and would appear to anticipate the instant invention (see claims).

Bowlin et al. teach mixing cement, fly ash, and fumed silica with drill cuttings to form a solid material (see claims).

Hale and Nahm (from Shell Oil Co.) teach mixing drill cuttings with blast furnace slag to form a solid material. Blast furnace slag is a pozzolan and is cementitious so it would appear that these references also anticipate the instant invention.

Sharp teach mixing drill cuttings and lime to form a solidified mixture thus anticipating the instant invention (see claims).

Richardson et al. teach mixing drill cuttings with a solidifier or stabilizer selected from fly ash, lime, cement, and gypsum (see col.3, lines 25-30) and would appear to anticipate the instant invention.

Carpenter et al. teach a composition comprising cement and drilling fluid and would also appear to anticipate the instant invention.

Even if not anticipated, overlapping ranges of amounts would have been prima facie obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art. With respect to compressive strength values, it is expected that upon curing that these prior art cement compositions would also have an equivalent strength because the process of mixing cement materials with drill cuttings and curing would appear no different.

Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as failing to set forth the subject matter which applicant(s) regard as their invention.

The term "desired" listed twice in claim 1, "specified proportion", and "sufficient fraction" are all indefinite terms in claim 1. Deletion of these terms is advised.

The terms "water based" are indefinite in claim 3. Deletion of based and insertion of containing is advised.

The terms "oil based" are indefinite in claim 8. Deletion of based and insertion of containing is advised.

The Vidrio et al. patent has been cited of interest as relevant art yet would not appear to teach the instantly claimed invention.
